I worked with Colm O'Suilleabhain for more than a decade during my time as editor of the international magazine Bridge design & engineering. Colm quickly developed a thorough understanding of the readership of the magazine and as a result he was able to pitch ideas for features that were relevant and timely, and which suited the audience perfectly.

He was always conscious of the demands of publication deadlines, and I knew I could rely on him to respond to queries promptly and with clarity. His articles were thorough, accurate and well-written, and he was skilled at communicating dense technical content in a digestible and readable form. His articles needed very little intervention from me, hence I was always happy to accept pitches from him.
